—Misses May and Lucy Colville were at home to a most elaborate and lovely reception on Friday afternoon at their apartments in the Robneel building.

Their attractive rooms on the third floor were beautifully decorated in quantities of scarlet carnations and ferns which banked the mantels and stands and formed the immense bouquets placed about. The halls on the second floor were also decked with potted plants and the stairway was entwined in smilax. There the musicians were seated, Prof. Bruce Reynolds and Miss Parker, who rendered many lovely selections on piano and violin.

The hostesses, both exquisitely gowned, received the guests upon entering and they were assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Ezekiel Arnold, of Covington, Mrs. Lewis Taylor, Mrs. McClellan Turney and Mrs. Jesse Turney.

The table in the dining room where Mrs. Amos Turney, Jr., and Mrs. J. F. Clay presided, was covered with a lace cloth and in the center was a great bouquet of the lovely scarlet blossoms. The chandelier held a mass of smilax among the lights, extending from each of which was a full rope that fell to the edges of the table. Misses Marie Talbot and Nanet Wallingford also assisted in pinning little ribbons upon the guests after they were served with the most tempting buffet luncheon.

Interesting Article by Paris Man.

The Lexington Herald of Sunday contained an excellent feature article entitled "Traction History in Lexington," which was the work of Mr. Robert S. Porter, of Paris, who recently accepted a position as a member of the editorial staff of that paper.

The story was illustrated with a large number of half tone cuts of the officials of the traction system, cars and property and shows clearly the rapid development of the street car and traction systems in Lexington and the surrounding territory.

The feature was one of the most interesting that has ever been printed in that paper and the writer is to be congratulated upon his efforts. Mr. Porter is an old experienced newspaper man and having a thorough knowledge of the game is proving himself a most valuable acquisition to the editorial department of the Herald.

February Court.

February court day was one of the smallest in many months in point of attendance, the crowd being reduced on account of the rainy, disagreeable weather, which was followed by a raging snow storm. Practically all morning a steady rain fell which kept the number that ventured to the city, in doors most of the day.

Notwithstanding this fact the stock market was brisk and everything offered was sold at prices that were far above the average. The approaching season for farm work had the effect of stimulating the mule market and the one hundred head that were offered met with ready sale. The demand for work stock was brisk and good prices were realized.

The firm of Caywood & McClintock disposed of a number of mules as follows: To Fletcher Mann, of Lexington, two head for $435; to P. L. Weathers two for $360; to Asa Jewell, of Lexington, three for $350; one, $175; one, $215; one, $165; one, $210; one, $185; one, $260; two, $325; one, $165; one, $175; to Amos Turney, one mule for $200; to Chas. Clark, one for $200. They purchased two mules from John Greenway for $335, and two from John Smith, of Cynthiana, for $300.

Only twenty head of cattle were offered at the pens of M. J. Murphy & Co., all of which sold. These cattle were the property of Jonas Weil, who sold them to Mr. Letton at 5 cents per pound.

Bourbon County in the Lead

It will be of interest to Bourbon farmers to learn that according to a bulletin just issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor from Washington City, giving agricultural statistics of Kentucky by counties, that Bourbon ranks first in the following lines:

In the value of cattle which is estimated at $726,906, with Madison second at $718,215.

Value of wool produced in the census year of $36,371, with Harrison second at $35,024.

Value of live stock sold or slaughtered during the census year was $1,815,895, Fayette second with $1,741,709.

Value of grains and seeds, other than cereals, raised during the census year, $139,325; Clark county second with $93,458.

In the bulletin report, which is based on the thirteenth census, it is stated that the average Bourbon farm, which is 135 acres is larger than in any other county in Kentucky. Nelson county being second with 130.05 acres average.

In the total value of farm property Bourbon county ranks third with $22,409,088, but this total value shows a greater percentage of increase during the last ten years than Fayette or Jefferson, it being 52.5 in Bourbon against 42.8 in Fayette and 32.2 in Jefferson county.
